Android-based smartphone company OnePlus today announced the launch of its newest device, the OnePlus 10T, which we were able to check out ahead of time. The OnePlus 10T, priced starting at $649, boasts upgraded camera technology, so we thought we'd pit it against the iPhone 13 Pro Max to see just how it measures up. Subscribe to the MacRumors YouTube channel for more videos. The OnePlus 10T... Here is our list of the top 10 AirPlay apps for Android. 1) Double Twist We have mentioned this app quite a number of times on our platform. A free app that helps to sync your Android device with iTunes and other services as a media player, it has new AirPlay support that is available for users who upgrade with AirSync. AirSync is an app that is available for download after a payment of $5 that allows the Double Twist app to sync with iTunes but requires a free desktop assistant. Using the same wireless network, you can stream media content from your Android device. Download it here 2) iMediaShare Lite This is another free application that is useful for streaming music, photos, videos, and other media content from your Android device to your Apple TV, but only if they are connected over the same wireless network. Only requiring the installation of this application, it will detect your Apple TV from the android device itself. The ones who love to stream from online sites like YouTube, CNN, etc. would particularly enjoy this application. 3) Twonky Beam Moving on in our list with Twonky Beam, which happens to be a free application for AirPlay, and offers users the freedom to stream audio, video, and photos to Apple TV and any other device of their choice. For the ones who prefer the internet to stream their multimedia content, this app offers an enjoyable experience. The working of this application resembles that of AirPlay mirroring. The media stored on your computer can also be accessed. 4) AllShare For the ones who have regularly used Samsung devices, the mention of this app doesn't come as a surprise as this app comes preloaded within the device and is very similar to the working of AirPlay. With this application, users can access all the data that is stored on other devices and hence, play it on their android device. However, the major functionality that is offered is that of being able to stream media content on your Apple TV. Download it here 5) Android HiFi and AirBubble There are two ways of looking at this application; Android HiFi is the free version while the AirBubble license app costs a mere $2 bucks. Through the application, one can convert their android device into an AirPlay receiver. Audio content can be played on the Android device from iTunes or other iOS Devices. This is particularly useful for the ones who wish to roam around the house with a common wireless network in place. 6) Zappo TV One of the many online multimedia services, this one has android apps for AirPlay for Apple TV, WD TV Live, Samsung, Sony, and LG TVs, but we won't recommend that you bank upon their popularity. However, the user experience may vary from device to device. 7) AirPlay and DLNA Player This one is a free application and does all it should justify its name. It is basically a DLNA and UPnP player along with offering support for your Apple TV. After the installation of the application is complete, users have the option to stream media content from their android or iOS device to the Apple TV. This app is a popular medium to connect your Android Device to your Apple TV. Download it here 8) Using AllCast For the users who are well acquainted with Double Twist, this app comes as a pleasant upgrade. The app performs the same function but does it better than its prequel. Offering you a list of devices to stream your content, all you have to do is choose the big screen and you are good to go. However, unlike Double Twist, this one doesn't allow you to access applications in the background while you sit back and enjoy your music. Also, nothing much to enjoy on the screen while the music is being played. Download it here 9) Using the DS Video One can also use DS Video to stream their video collection on to the Disk Station to their Amazon Phone or tablet. Browsing is made relatively easy as each of them is sorted into different libraries. Also, along with each movie, one can find enough information to reach a conclusive decision. The users also have the option to record TV programs and manage their viewing schedule. Download it here 10) AirStream Got an AirPlay-enabled receiver and an Android device? Well, this app is all that you need. With the option to send any media content to the Apple-TV, this is a great way to enjoy all your media content on the Apple TV without having to worry about any iOS devices. However, before you go on to install this app, we must notice that it is necessary for you to root your device. Alongside this, there is a short payment that must be made to enjoy all its features. Otherwise, it is a great app to have. In the above section, we have listed out the best applications for you when you wish to use AirPlay with your Android device. Let us know your experience if you have used any of these apps and we'll recommend ways to enhance your experience. Recommend; You might also want to mirror your Android to the computer. Wondershare MirrorGo is the best choice for you. Mirror your android device to your computer! Play mobile games on the big screen of the PC with MirrorGo. If you have an Android phone and a Google Chromecast, it's easy to "cast" from your phone to the TV. If you're trying to go from an Android phone to an Apple TV, though, it's trickier. That's because Apple uses its own method, AirPlay. Here we show how you can stream content from Android to Apple AirPlay. What Is AirPlay? AirPlay is a protocol that lets you wirelessly stream audio and video between your iPhone, iPad, Mac, Apple TV, and even Windows PC running iTunes. All you need to do from your phone is tap the AirPlay icon, then select the device you'd like to stream to. Unfortunately, one of the few platforms this protocol doesn't support is Android. While you can cast from your iPhone to a Chromecast fairly easily, this doesn't work in the other direction. The good news is that there are apps to help you stream from your Android to an Apple TV or other AirPlay device. The bad news is that in every case there's some sort of catch. 1. LocalCast LocalCast is a popular casting solution that helps you stream from your Android device to AirPlay or Apple TV. It also supports multiple other devices such as DLNA, Xbox 360, Amazon Fire TV or Stick, Roku. You also get subtitle support for both Chromecast and Apple TV. However, you need to have Apple TV 4 in order to get subtitle support. Since the app is free, it does include ads. Buying the pro version gets rid of ads, unlocks video preview while seeking and more. 2. AirSync If your Apple TV is the heart of your home entertainment system, including your music, AirSync may be perfect for you. The app is made by DoubleTwist, known for its Android music player. As a matter of fact, this app requires that you install that app. As you might guess, this app is focused 100 percent on music streaming. It found the Apple TV we were using quickly and played music to it without a hitch. Yes, it's simple, but it's one of the more solid experiences we've found. 3. AllCast AllCast has a much larger feature set. In addition to streaming to AirPlay devices, it also works with the DLNA protocol. This means it can also stream to Roku, Chromecast, Amazon Fire TV, and a number of other devices. To use AllCast, you'll need to install the app on both your Android device and the Apple TV. Otherwise, it will say it found your Apple TV, but you won't be able to play anything. The free version of the app has a five-minute viewing limit on both videos and pictures. To remove this limit, you can upgrade to the premium version of the app for $5. 4. iMediaShare iMediaShare app allows you to stream all of your Android content on the Apple TV via AirPlay. Just like every other app listed on this post, it also supports multiple players, such as Xbox 360, Xbox One, DISH Hopper, and smart TVs like Samsung, Sony, Panasonic, LG, and Philips. You can stream your favorite music and show your photos and videos on the big screen. The connection is also pretty simple. You only need to choose the device you would like to stream on, and you are all set. Overall, it's a nice, simple and easy-to-use app for streaming from Android to AirPlay. 5. Mirroring360 Sender Mirroring360, as the name implies, is meant to mirror your screen over AirPlay. This app comes in two versions: the basic free version, Mirroring360 Sender Basic, and the premium version, which costs $5. You're better off starting with the free version. We ran into issues trying to use the app, and other users have had similar reports. It's worth a try, but don't pay for it until you're sure it works for you. Wrapping Up While there are plenty of options for streaming from Android to AirPlay, each one has some sort of caveat. If you're looking to stream music, that is fairly simple. On the other hand, when it comes to video, you may be better off just using your Apple TV remote to find what you want to watch. If instead you're an iPhone user looking to watch content on an Android TV, you can do that. There's an app called AirScreen that is meant to do exactly this. We even mentioned it on our list of the best Android TV apps. Is this article useful?
